Episode 40

Hello my love, and welcome back to another episode of the Oath Oracle podcast. I am so excited to be here with you today, and it's been a hot minute since I had a new podcast episode, so thank you for your patience. I have been just in such a beautiful season of really prioritizing my personal life, and it's been just really a season of absolutely filling my cup and really reflecting on what it means to me to give from overflow in my business.

If you don't follow me on Instagram, please go follow me on IG right now because that is where I am always, always, always very consistently active. But I'm so excited because I feel like I'm very replenished and rejuvenated to be creating way more consistent episodes here on my podcast, because I love this space so much. It's so important to me, and that's why I always want to bring my very best energy.

And in these last few weeks, since my last upload, I've just been really prioritizing my personal life. I've been doing my art, I've been hanging with my friends, I've been in my dating era, I've been in a huge health glow up, and I'm going to record a podcast episode all about this. And I've also been on a substance free journey.

Let me know if you want to listen to a podcast episode about why I have chosen this. I, of course, as I've mentioned in the past, have had periods in my past where there was a real substance abuse happening, but I also felt the call recently to be going completely substance free. And it has been over one month at this point that I'm recording this podcast.

And what that meant for me was not smoking cannabis, which is something that was a great, you know, helper and friend for me throughout my life. But it was just time for me to be completely free of that medicine, at least for now. And including things like, you know, I have always been a fan of microdosing psilocybin.

That's also something I'm not doing. Not a drop of alcohol, just, like completely substance free unless you count caffeine. And I also switched to half caff. So it's really been a beautiful time of just coming into what is my baseline? Where does my true energy lie? Where does my creative energy truly want to go? When I am just connected deeply to myself with nothing, altering my state of consciousness, connected and grounded into the earth, and really just refining and getting deeper in touch with what my purpose is and how I want to express my purpose in this new season.

Because our purpose always evolves, we are always evolving, and I really felt the need to have this little season that I've been in for the last month or so. Just deep, deep, deep embodiment, deep, profound healing really filling up my cup and raising my standards on how I give and create in my business to be from a full cup and also to really prioritize living a life of inspiration.

So that's where I've been. It has been amazing. I feel so happy, so whole and so peaceful inside myself, and I've truly never felt healthier. So yeah, let me know if you want a little more deep dives on those types of topics. I'm really happy to share. And I've just kind of been, I've also been still on the journey of really finding my flow ever since my neurodivergent diagnosis last year, which was about six months ago.

Maybe even a bit more that I was diagnosed with both ADHD and autism. So that's been also a real journey for me of discovering who I am and also reflecting on how I have leaned on certain substances, just not knowing that I was neurodivergent, to try and fit in a box that society was asking me to fit in, or that we're conditioned to fit in.

So this has just been a real beautiful season of really getting to know myself on a deep level. and yeah, I just it's been very, very, very magical. And I'm glad that I gave myself that. I'm glad that I allowed myself to cocoon into that and to really be replenished, to be now speaking to you guys from this absolutely full cup, feeling like I'm just a fountain and there's this overflow coming through me and it just feels absolutely amazing.

So that's where I've been. That's my little update. And now what I want to talk about today is I want to talk about some of the key things in my journey, in my business from 0 to 2.6 million. And this is in my home currency, the Canadian dollar. Okay. So we just recently surpassed 2.5 million. We're at 2.6 million in my home currency, the Canadian dollar.

I need to clarify that because I do most I basically do all my business numbers in U.S. dollars, but because it's just such a powerful milestone for me. And I am Canadian and I do live in Canada. yeah. It's just really powerful for me to receive that and, and recognize that for myself and acknowledge that within my own business journey.

Although I do my, most of the numbers that I share is U.S. dollars. I try to always say the currency. but yeah, this is just such a milestone. It's like, I'm not going to minimize this. This is $2.6 million. And like my home country, my home currency. So it's been such a profound journey. Oh my lord, these four years in business have just truly been the deepest journey that I can imagine in terms of the path of business being a path of self-actualization and the path of business being a path of healing, the path of business being a path of personal development, not the personal development hamster wheel where nothing is ever enough.

But the personal development that comes when we see our business and the journey as we move towards that inner calling, and we follow this mysterious inner calling, and we make our path that no one else can make for us, no one else can tell us. We can have coaches, mentors, we can learn the things, but we will always be the ones who make this path for ourself. Where there was no path before.

We, each and every one of us entrepreneurs, is pioneering a path that simply wasn't there before. People can have been doing similar things, but no one does it the way we do and no one's business path is identical to our own. So I want to share some of the keys that have just been so important for me in this journey, not just in creating the 2.6 million, not just in creating that, not just in receiving that, but in who I became in the journey, things that I thought I would never be capable of doing, aspects of myself I didn't know I was ever going to get a chance to taste, things I admired in others, and even felt jealousy about that I didn't realize I could unlock for myself within myself, and in my life as well.

So there have been a few key things to this that have just been absolutely vital to this journey in every year, and I feel that they will continue to be vital in every single year to come.

The first one is resourcefulness. Okay, so ever since I was a little kid, ever since I was, you know, I had a computer at a pretty young age. My dad worked with computers back in the day before he retired. And, I had a computer a little bit before other kids had a computer for that reason, which is funny because we didn't necessarily have money, but we had, like kind of access to like, computers and techie things because that was the industry that my dad worked in when he when they moved first to Canada, because they came here as refugees in the late 80s.

And through that, I just poked around in my early teens. I taught myself Photoshop just for fun. And I was like, just playing around, poking around, learning things because information is at our fingertips right now. So even if we don't have money to invest in a business coach, there is. So before you go complaining about not having money for a business coach, I always want to ask, have you used the information that's at your fingertips and integrated that?

Because that's what I did at the beginning, and that's what I did throughout my life. You know, throughout my life, as I was trying to figure things out, as I was trying to understand myself, as I was trying to learn different things, especially since I dropped out of high school when I was 15. The resource that I had was the internet, and we all have.

You listen to this podcast. You have the internet as well. The resourcefulness also meant when I left home when I was 15, and I literally just found a cute cafe that I thought looked cute, I printed out a resume. I showed up there and I don't even know if they were hiring. And you know, that was the kind of attitude that I had towards things of like, whatever I got, I'm going to make the best of it.

And at that time, I lived in a basement apartment that was moldy, that the doors improperly closed because there was so much warping in the home, the floor was slanted because there was so much warping in the home. Like I said, there was mold. There were rats literally in the ceilings and in the walls you could hear them, and in some places you could see them, because there was this weird place in the hallway where the ceiling was broken.

And so they put a thick piece of plastic up there, and it was transparent plastic, and you could literally look up and see the little mice's little feet and tails, like, sorry, that was a bit gross. But that was where I was when I was applying for my very first job. Once I dropped out of school, left my home and moved to the city.

So whatever, whatever I had, I made the best of it. Whatever small amount of money I had, you know, working full time, working 40 hours and making like $700 every two weeks. You know, back in the day, this is like over ten years ago, right? This is actually more like, yet, 17, 18 years ago. So things were a little bit cheaper.

And hopefully minimum wage is a lot higher now. But at that time, that's what I was making. I was making about $700 every two weeks. And, I was paying my rent. And then when I would go grocery shopping, I would just buy what was on sale, and I would still try to buy organic. I valued health from a young age.

I would just buy what was on sale instead of deciding like, oh, I need this. Oh my God, it's so expensive. I would just go and I would just get what I could get. And I just made the best of things as I as I continued to grow and that attitude, right from the moment that I left home and how to fend for myself and had to start like learning on the fly how to manage money, which was not something that was learned or something that was even modeled to me in my home.

There was a lot of financial ups and downs in my home, a lot of really like, yeah, hard, bills not being paid, electricity being cut off, heat being cut off, that kind of thing. So healthy money management, responsible money management was not modeled to me, so I could just figure it out on the fly. As a 15 year old.

And the other thing is, I learned a lot of skills. So whatever it was at first job, I was like, cool. I want to, like, be in this cute cafe. This seems like a cute place to be. That's literally the whole reason why I chose it. And I ended up moving through the ranks of being a barista to the point that I actually became, I competed in competitions in Seattle. I never won any, but I made it to some rounds, like I made it through some rounds and I literally was like flown to Seattle by the owner of the cafe to, sorry. We drove there. We drove there from Vancouver. and I was like, competing in latte art competitions.

And then I was like the trainer of the other, like, baristas to teach latte art and that kind of thing. So whatever I was doing, I was like, all right, what's the best I can do here? What's the best I can do with this? You know? So that attitude still serves me to this very day. And especially for those who are in the beginner phases in business, where you see things like, oh my God, like a business course, but it's like $10,000 and maybe you don't have that money to invest.

There's so much at your fingertips. So before you start stressing and feeling the lack of what we can't have, ask yourself, are you truly using and utilizing the resources that you do have? Because the more that you're able to utilize the resources you do have and receive what you do have and manage what you do have, like managing that whatever amount of money you make now instead of waiting like and start thinking, oh, one day if I make more money, then I'll then I'll save.

When you learn to save with smaller amounts of money, that's just going to continue to serve you on an upward trajectory. So work with what you have now. Manage and steward what you have now in a way that you're proud of and receive what there is in your life now to receive, because that will just support you as you continue on your upward spiral to be, in an expanded capacity of receptivity.

So resourcefulness, another really big piece that is absolutely vital. And I did learn this. This took me a bit longer to learn. I didn't have like, you know, the scrappiness I luckily unlocked that pretty early on when I left my home and I was like, all right, we're really in this bitch now all by myself, you know?

And of course, I was supported by spirit, and my spiritual team, but I didn't know that at the time. So I felt very alone. And it was like, all right, like, we're doing this. I was living moment to moment to moment, just figuring it out. But it took me longer to figure out that every single failure is data, every single failure, every single rejection and every single disappointment is an opportunity for growth and evolution.

And ultimately, that is a big part of what I believe to be the meaning of life, is for us to evolve and to actually see what we are capable of, not what. Like I was born feeling like I had no future because I didn't have certain privileges that I saw other people had, or like kids on TV they get all these Christmas presents, kids on TV, they do all this stuff with their parents.

They to Disneyland, kids on TV, they have a college fund, so they know they're going to go to college. I didn't have those things. So my aunts, a shout out to my aunt who did take me to Disneyland when I was like 14. And I finally got to go. I was a little bit too old for it at that time, but that was okay. It was still a cool memory that I will always treasure.

And so that I held some bitterness. And I'm a projector in human design, so bitterness is my not self theme. So I held bitterness and I was like, yeah, I'm just not meant for these big things. I'm just not meant for much. You know, some people are just dealt these good cards and some people are dealt these

o a t h
o r a c l e

PODCAST

with Agesha Durrani

not so good cards. And I'm in that latter group and I would look at other people doing amazing things, having happy lives, having friend groups, having their university educations and things like that. And I was like, yeah, I'll just survive and make the best of what I had. So I was kind of like the shadow of my resourcefulness is like, I'm just.

I'm just here to make the best of what I have. And that's it. Not realizing that I can transform the cards I was dealt into some very fucking cool cards and actually create something absolutely epic with my life. And it wasn't until I realized that every single failure, every single disappointment, every single thing that didn't work out was an opportunity for me to grow and evolve.

So now in business, when I work with clients and we were doing, you know, right now I'm running my program Rich and Resourced, which is my Money and Nervous System program. And we were talking about, you know, the fears that come up when we think about receiving large amounts of money and we consciously we think, yeah, of course I want to receive money.

Of course I want success. Yeah, of course I want that. But our subconscious, which has much more influence on our life and our actions and therefore our thoughts and therefore our results and our emotions, which also impacts our results. So basically, our subconscious mind has way more influence on our life, our experience of life than we think, and in a way than the conscious mind does.

Right? So we consciously mind, of course, I want more abundance. Of course I want love. Of course I want success. But when our subconscious mind feels that we are not safe to receive those things, we're not going to allow ourselves to have it. And this is another piece from my life I could consciously say, I want love, I want to be with my king.

But then I had to illuminate the pattern of choosing people and being attracted to people who are emotionally unavailable, because a part of me didn't feel safe for the true intimacy of a real reciprocal relationship with someone who's actually available to be in it with me. Because that's not what I grew up with, and that's not what I was taught and modeled.

So that's just that's like more of the romance side of things. I want to talk about the business side of things more right now. So in Rich and Resourced, we did an exercise for us to actually reveal what our subconscious mind is truly holding around our self-protection mechanisms that are actually sabotaging our success and our and our wealth.

And a very big one that came through for so many people was the fear around failure, the fear around, or the belief I won't be able to handle it. I won't be able to maintain it. It's going to be too much responsibility. It's going to feel too heavy. So when people consciously know that they desire and that they want and their calling in success, their calling in wealth, or the calling in love or anything else that we might desire.

But there is a piece of code written in the programming that says, yeah, but you cannot fail. That's not allowed. You cannot be in situations where you might fail because failing is not okay. They will never, never reach their potential in any area of life or that is playing out ever. Never. Every single successful person in any industry that you looked at failed multiple times along the way.

Of course, it depends on how you define failure. To me, true failing like, oh my God, I failed is quitting. But the little failures along the way and some of them might not seem little. But in the bigger picture, in the bigger scheme of things, when you zoom out and you're connected to the higher vision of the purpose that you have in this world.

A launch flopping might feel really big in the moment. It might feel like the biggest failure in the moment. But in the bigger scheme of things, let's be real. I want to be doing my work for at least another ten years. Maybe I would love the option to retire when I'm 40. Absolutely. I'm 35 right now,

o a t h
o r a c l e
PODCAST

and I think that's kind of like my personal wealth goals, like retirement is optional when I'm 40, but I know myself, I'm going to be working way past ten years, actually.

Like, I want to be like 60, 70 years old, like, if God wills that I live that long, I would love to just be writing and sharing and giving things to the collective all my fucking life. So when we hyperfocus on something like a launch flopping or putting something out there and no one buys it, or you try something and your friends see in your high school friends and or your past coworkers or whatever, see, you go for it.

Like you leave your corporate career and like, want to become a coach or like a spirit doing some kind of spiritual work or like an artist or something that people are so conditioned to see as like, that's not practical or like you're leaving this good job to do what? And there's all those judgments and you will not allow yourself to potentially be seen putting something out that isn't a huge success right away and be seen by those people until you're defining that as failure and you're also saying failure is not allowed.

Well, you're never going to step on the path because the very act of stepping on the path of your purpose is exposing you to failure, as in things not working out exactly how you wanted. And every single fucking the author of Harry Potter, you know, Oprah like some of the most like. Not that those are, you know, people I necessarily admire.

I think there's some sketchy, some sketchy and like not that they're not, they're not the, they're not people I idolize. What I'm trying to say. No one's perfect, but people in every single industry, Steve Jobs, like any industry, you could think of the most successful people. They have failed many times on the way to that success.

They have failed and been rejected many times on the way to that success. So if you know that for a fact that all successful people that you have ever seen, that you have ever met have failed at things along the

o a t h
o r a c l e
PODCAST

way, yet you do not allow yourself to step on the path of your purpose because you might fail, because you're not okay with failing.

You are excluding yourself from your true potential of success. You are choosing a path where your true potential of success is not.

When we see all failure as in things not working out how we wanted, maybe something flopping, taking a risk, being seen by others and it doesn't go well. Yeah, it can happen. It can happen. So what if you were willing to feel it? What if you were willing to feel the feelings that you are trying to avoid by avoiding failure?

Because avoiding failure, if that means that you are avoiding your entire path, it also means you're avoiding success. Of course, on my path to success, I'm not going headfirst into failure. So in a way, I'm avoiding it. I'm learning from all the past failures so that there's less failures and etc. it's not like I'm like, you know, just jumping, like going out of my way to seek failure.

So when I say avoiding failure, yeah, we gain wisdom. We learn how to navigate. We learn from past mistakes, we learn from our mentors. So we don't have to make the mistakes that they made. That's one of the beautiful things about mentorship. We collapse time, all the mistakes and trials and errors that they went through to reach and create their results.

We get to benefit from the lessons that they distilled from that. Without us going through that same pain and without us going through that same trial and error. But if you're avoiding your whole purpose path because you're unwilling to fail, what that actually means is you're unwilling to feel the sensations of the emotions that would come up in your body, which is where we experience the emotions.

o a t h
o r a c l e
PODCAST
with Agesha Durrani

You're unwilling to feel those sensations. That's what it really means. People who have put themselves out there played big, bet on themselves, made bold moves. They're willing to feel those feelings. They are willing to feel those feelings. They are willing to fail, sometimes even publicly.

And there's like a quote like when, first they call you crazy, but then when it works, they call you a genius. So another thing I learned along the way is trusting our desires, trusting what we want, knowing the difference between an ego desire, which is a desire that we're, you know, is conditioned into us, or a desire that has to do with, like, our status or a desire that has to do with filling a void inside of ourselves.

Like, once I have this, then I will be happier than I will feel whole versus a soul desire, which is a desire that feels expansive from deep within us. And that's what astrology felt like for me. And this brings me to my final piece that I want to share with you guys, which is what has been with me all through this journey since the year before I left home when I was 14.

I left home and school when I was 15. The year before I left home when I was 14 is when I discovered astrology, and before that point, I was very stuck in freeze mode. In my childhood and in my early teens, I was undiagnosed autistic and ADHD. I had very little. I felt that I had very little emotional support.

I was in a lot of pain. I couldn't really communicate properly. I felt very locked inside of myself. I was not verbal for that much of my childhood. I got more talkative in my teens as I became, like, angsty and hormonal, which probably helped me to break out of my freeze. To be perfectly honest, I was buried in unprocessed trauma, including intergenerational trauma that I did not understand.

There was a lot of dark energies and dark entities that I had to free myself from and learn to understand, over periods of time. And when I discovered astrology for the first time in my life, I felt seen and I felt real. I didn't feel real literally in my life until that point, and it was so wild to feel seen.

o a t h
o r a c l e
PODCAST
with Agesha Durrani

But all what was happening is I was reading an article on the internet about Aquarius sun sign, and so I was like, who am I being seen by? I felt connected to the cosmos. I felt connected to the universe, not just in this bubble of pain that I felt like I was in, where I felt like me. Oddly, it felt like I was, like, excluded from the world.

Somehow I felt a sense of union. I felt a sense of belonging. I felt a sense of being where I actually was meant to be instead of more how I felt before that, which is like I didn't ask to be born. I was kind of had that vibe, you know? I never asked to be born, even though we did.

We did on a soul level, asked to be born. We asked to be born to the exact parents that we have. but I didn't know that at the time. And so I found astrology. And then when I moved out and I was much younger than people around me, so I moved out. I was in a shared home with, I'm not sure if I've told the story on my podcast or not before, but, I lived in a home where there were six people total living in a two story house that had like two bathrooms and two kitchens.

And everyone was in their 20s, all the way up to early 30s. And I was 16 and 17 living in this house. And, so I didn't have anyone around me my age. I wasn't going to school. I would go to work and I would like, be friends with the people from my work. But I was also like, still had a whole piles and piles and piles of really, profound, unprocessed trauma, an extremely dysregulated nervous system.

So when I was at work, I was masking very, very, very highly. And now that I've received my autism diagnosis 20 years later, I'm 35. I received it, before my 35th birthday, but yeah, now that I received my autism diagnosis and actually had a score that even among autistic women, my masking was extra high. And autistic women have very high masking overall, which is why they tend to be diagnosed less than men.

And same with ADHD. Let me know if you want an episode about neurodivergent. it's not that I'm like the expert in teaching on it, but if you want to hear about, like, my personal journey and things that I've learned, I'm really happy to share that. So just let me know if you're interested in that.

So I was masking very heavily at work. My social interactions were very, very, very heavily masked. And then when I was home alone, I would just be totally in functional freeze numbing. Hence, the cannabis smoking, numbing, dissociating. And then where I found, once again, a sense of connection, a sense of something to get lost into. I was studying astrology, and I would be working all week long and then get home to study astrology.

It would be the weekend. I'd make my coffee in the morning, start studying astrology and it was just purely from pleasure. It's not how people approach learning these days. Now that online business is so popular, where people are signing up for a course and they're like, okay, now I'm gonna start doing paid readings. I studied astrology for about 17, maybe, maybe more like 15 years before I ever did a paid reading.

Yeah, that makes sense. 15 years before I ever did a paid reading for someone. because it was just purely coming. And I'm not saying you need to do that before charging for readings. I'm just sharing my journey, which is that my relationship with astrology was completely pure. It was completely for myself and for me to just simply understand myself, understand this world and understand my place in it.

Understand why my life had been so full of challenge. And what happened is that I went from feeling like a victim in my life. Like once again, I just got dealt these cards. No one loves me. I don't get to go to. I don't have a college fund like everyone I see on TV. Christmases are so hard. Birthdays are so hard. I just cry alone, like that

I went from that feeling like a victim to through decoding my birth chart and through understanding the karmic themes in this incarnation. And also. So first of all, the karmic themes in this incarnation, why certain things hurt so much understanding that I needed those experiences, and it was always on the map of my soul for me to go through certain things.

And even as you start working with the transits and you see that there's certain the transits are like, the planets in the sky right now and how they're activating your chart and seeing like, oh, wow. Like this extremely hard period of time was during these transits in my eighth house of death and rebirth. And like, I was actually meant to have a death and rebirth instead of me,

How I viewed things, which is that everything felt wrong, like because I was struggling so much, it was like, wow, I must just be a piece of shit that just like, this is just the life I get and like, fuck the world. Like that's kind of how I felt. And then it transformed into realizing it's literally written in the stars.

It's literally part of the blueprint of my self-actualization. And after that realization, changing my perspective on the struggles in my life, I started to unlock the gifts. Because every single struggle has very profound gifts, every single wound can become a place of miracles. And so those very things that hurt me the most, like having lack and not having enough money, not having education, not I was felt quite hurt that, you know, I was just working minimum wage jobs and other people my age were like going to university and like, becoming engineers and like that kind of thing.

And just feeling like, well, those are the cards I was dealt... to now having the best job in the world for me, celebrating 2.6 million in total revenue in just over four years. all of the amazing dreams that have come through true for me since then, like being featured by Forbes, flying business class all over the world doing incredible, amazing spiritual pilgrimages and just really like writing and my writing, reaching thousands of people, my work reaching thousands of people, my podcast reaching tens of thousands of people.

Like it's just been absolutely amazing. This is a top 2% podcast, which just blows my mind. I never expected anything like that with my podcast. So it first started with transforming the wounds and

o a t h
o r a c l e
PODCAST

understanding that the struggle wasn't life being unfair to me, that the struggle was actually on my soul blueprint as part of myself actualization. And this also isn't the distorted, shallow new age view of oh, you attract everything into your life.

It's a, it's different than that victim blaming, gaslighting. It's not that I attracted it into my life, it's that I literally needed even the most hardest, unfair, abusive, even experiences that I experienced. I needed them to unlock certain things within myself. That doesn't mean people who perpetrated abuse or were abusers in my life. That doesn't mean they're justified or that I welcome them to be my close friends or anything like that.

But what it does mean is that everything works in my favor towards my self-actualization, because I see the map, I see the map. I have the navigational tool. Then I started to start unlocking the gifts in my chart, the blessing placements in my chart, my Venus placement, my Jupiter placement, and by understanding the destiny point in my chart and understanding my role in this world through my body and through this incarnation, understanding these gifts that I had.

I moved out of survival mode into living and like doubling down basically in the things that are my gifts, doubling down basically into what is my beauty, what is my magnetism, what my abundance points are, and that without that, guys, I would never, I don't think, have had the courage to go after my business path in the way that I had because I went after it with everything that I got, everything I had no plan B, I had no other job, I had no other income, I had no security net, I had no savings.

I gave it everything, and I don't know if I would have been able to trust my life and know my gifts that hadn't yet been expressed through, without being able to see them in the mirror of the chart. Because a chart is a mirror of you, it's not some random roll of the dice like, oh, I got a shitty one and I got a good one over here.

It's not that it's a mirror of you, it's a mirror of this incarnation. And it's also mirroring to you the relevant past life karma that you are processing in this incarnation that are relevant to this incarnation. So through understanding that in the big picture, visionary way, that is what gave me the confidence to say, you know what, I am fucking meant for this.

I don't know where this path is going to lead me, but I see it all right here. And I had to look at it for years before, I didn't just like get it and then just go for it. Like it took me a while to really like, you know, I see it, I know it's there. I know my North Node path.

I know where my Venus and Jupiter are. I know my midheaven, I know this, this, that and the other. But I still, you know, it was a journey before I really took that leap. And so without being able to see myself in ways that I wasn't, hadn't been able to see myself without astrology at that point. And I'm not saying people need this.

There are people who intuitively pick up on all their destiny. Things like, it's like I said, it's a mirror of you. So like, you know, you can do it without a mirror. But I don't know if I personally could have because of the amount of trauma I'd experience, because of how disembodied that I was, because of my substance abuse issues that were all around me.

Like, it's your perceptions, your intuition is not as clear. So I'm not saying everyone needs to be fluent in astrology or get a reading to be on their destiny path. Something that's really cool in my experiences as a reader is doing readings for people who are really on their destiny path already, and it's like, wow, you are so on your destiny path and you're just giving them so much confirmation.

And then there's always another level, right? Because they're getting a reading in that moment for a new level and a new, octave of their purpose. And there's always a new direction. So there's always more on the upward spiral. But my point is, for me, for my life, I cannot imagine getting out of the hole that I was in without the navigation system, without understanding the blueprint, and without understanding myself because my perception, my self-concept, was that I was just basically a piece of shit.

Like I just was, you know, dealt a really bad hand in life. Also, no one loves me and I'm a piece of shit. Like that was basically my self-concept. So being able to see who I really am. And of course our souls are infinite. The chart is representing this incarnation and relevant past life karma.

Of course on a soul level, I'm infinite, but even understanding this finite incarnation through the birth chart and working through my traumas, that actually helped me get more in touch with my infinite nature, which is beyond what any birth chart is like. Through following that map and unlocking aspects of myself that I had never even touched, that I didn't even know were there.

Then when I entered into the business realm and I started my business and I applied astrology to all of my strategic moves from what offers I was putting out to when I was launching things to hiring through when like when I was launching my podcast, when I was doing a giveaway, when I was doing a group program versus opening up 1 to 1, when I was doing a photoshoot, when I was taking time off, like finding the power days for things that were really important to me, finding and seeing when there were these periods of time where I was really meant to prioritize my healing.

Like just recently, I'm in my 12th house production year. I'm thinking about doing a podcast on that. So really love your guys feedback. If you want to hear these podcasts that I'm mentioning, like sooner rather than later because I have so many ideas that I have, I'm so full of ideas since taking this little like, replenishment, filling my cup season. so it's really great to get your guys feedback on this and yeah.

So I applied astrology to my business strategies right from day one. And in the beginning, I had never even had a $5,000 a month in any job that I had and I thought, wow. Like, if I had $5,000 every month, that would be like $60,000 a year doing what I love in my business. So within, you know, I launched my business in March 2020. By December 2020, I had already had multiple $10K months, and I had an $18k month U.S. dollar cash received, not sales, but the cash that came in revenue in my business, $18,000 U.S. in December 2020.

So just months later of that same year, I had far surpassed, almost four times what my goal had been. And I didn't think I was going to reach that goal in the first year. I thought I could. I was like, yeah, I'll be working at this for years and like making $60k a year. That was kind of my goal.

And then by the following March, just one year later, I had a $35,000 USD month. Now since then I've had $50k, $50k is the absolute baseline, absolute lowest that my months have been. Basically, in the past year I've had $60k months. Many, just for the past two months, we're $62,000 U.S cash received, $69,000 U.S cash received in April.

And I've had $70k months all the way up to $122,000 U.S. dollars cash received, not sales, in my business. So that means in one month I made double what my goal was to make in a year. And that's just how the path has unfolded and how following the golden thread with the navigation tool of my soul blueprint of my soul's map with that navigation tool, not knowing what the destination it was leading me to, but knowing I am on the path of my purpose.

I'm on the path of my destiny. I don't need to know what that destination is because we can't see it. That's what we can see is within predictability, and it's within what we know from the past. What we can't see. That is where miracles lie. That is where the miracle, the true fulfillment and fruition of our destiny is beyond what we can see.

And it's beyond our fears. And for me, having this navigational tool, I just cannot imagine my life without it. I've lived more than half my life, like I'm 35, I discovered it when I was 14. I cannot imagine my life without it. And that's why I'm so passionate about this. So I am so excited guys, that tomorrow, yes, tomorrow I am hosting a free live masterclass called Astrology for Business The Blueprint to Sacred Success.

Yes, it is tomorrow and don't worry if you are listening to this in the future, which I hope you are. Hello to the future. The replay will absolutely be available for you and the link will be in the show notes here. Whether you're joining us live or whether it is the replay. And I'm so excited to dive deep.

Normally these classes go for 90 minutes to up to two hours. I'm so excited to connect and share and overflow, because what has been distilled through me, through these experiences for 21 years of living life with astrology as this ally, as this navigational tool, as this map that has helped me to actualize my potential in ways I literally could not even dream up.

I wasn't even capable of dreaming of what my life is now and to now share this with clients, I'm going to share some key points and tons of value that you can take away from this right now to activate more magnetism. Whether you have a business already, or whether you're wanting to head in that direction, or you just desire to activate more of your purpose and your abundance codes in your chart.

So I'm so excited for this event to connect with my community. I'm so excited to share because I have been on a deep journey. really filling up my cup. Really getting in deeper touch with my inspiration, with my purpose. And I'm just, yeah, I'm just beaming. I'm bursting at the seams to share this with you. So the link is in the show notes.

Thank you. So much for listening. Thank you so much for signing up for the astrology for business Masterclass. And if you love this episode, I so appreciate Apple reviews. I so appreciate any reviews, sharing to your story. Email me, send me a message. I really love all that feedback, especially now that I am uploading more regularly in my podcast.

I'm really excited. Love to hear your ideas and I'm so grateful to be here, and I'm so grateful that you're on the other side, hanging out with me. So I will see you very soon in the next episode and in the Astrology for Business masterclass. Take care, my love.
